WILL GET FAIR DEAL,
SAYS JUDGE JAMES*Republican Candidate For Governor Says Neither Will

Jurist Says Democrats Are Conducting Campaign of Hate and Mud Slinging

(By International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2—Judge Arthur H. James' whirlwind campaign of Allegheny County, a Democratic stronghold, was at an end today with the promise that under his administration as a Republican governor, labor and industry would stand on equal terms in Harrisburg, neither favored nor slighted over the other.

"Government should never be the partner of either industry or labor, but labor and industry must be partners together, with the government standing as an impartial referee of both," he told a luncheon meeting of 1,000 business men yesterday and later an audience of 2,500 voters at a rally at Syria Mosque in the evening.

James also delivered a warning to industry not to expect to go its way unregulated if he is elected. He told the businessmen they were to a great extent responsible themselves for creating the "fertile soil" from which have sprung what he termed Democratic "hymns of hate" against business.

"Industry will not have a free lance to do what it wants under my administration," he warned. "We're not going to have the old days over."

He branded the campaign of the Democratic party "the most elaborate and expensive mud-slinging act ever witnessed in Pennsylvania."

"Mendacity and audacity have been their theme—they have tried to brazen things out by abusing those who have stood for honesty, decency and progress," the candidate continued. "They have tried to raise such a cloud of dust that the blinders, misdeeds and greed of the Earle administration would be hidden."

Furthermore, Judge James declared, Charles Alvin Jones, Democratic candidate for governor, has steadfastly refused to face the election issues.

"Why doesn't Alvin Jones talk about the campaign issues?" James asked, and continued:

"What solution has he offered for unemployment? None. What solution has he offered for the business depression? None. What solution has he offered for the efforts of his backers to burn down the barriers set up by the Constitution against political place? None. What assurances does he offer that under his administration graft, greed, special privilege and corruption would not run even more riot than in the Earle regime? None."

The most prominent feature of the Democratic campaign is "mud-slinging," according to James.

Colored Republicans Hold Big Rally Here

Colored Republicans held a big meeting last night in Trades Hall. The meeting was very well attended and speakers of prominence addressed the group.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Maude Morrisette, Philadelphia, who discussed the issues of the campaign.

Other speakers included the Republican candidates, with the exception of Howard I. James, Esq., who was unable to be present. J. Leslie Kilocone, Esq., spoke in behalf of the candidacy of Mr. James.

The meeting concluded with the serving of refreshments.

Daughter Finds Father's Body Hanging From Tree

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 2—Stephen Sakaly, 58, Central avenue, is reported to have ended his life by hanging, Monday night, according to the police.

Shortly before 7 o'clock, Sakaly told members of his family he was going to the home of a neighbor to discuss details of a small construction job. Half an hour later, his daughter, Irene, walked into the side yard and saw her father's body dangling from a tree. She ran into the house, procured a butcher knife and slashed a rope which her father had used.

Dr. Theodore Cohen was called and pronounced Sakaly dead. Members of the family could ascribe no reason for the act. The dead man leaves a wife, Mary, a son, Charles, and two daughters.

N. Y. A. Girls Building
Picture Lending Library

The group of NYA girls, Visual Aid division, are building a 2000 picture lending library for the Bristol schools. Under the direction of Mrs. Kathryn H. Fretz, Project Field Supervisor, NYA, Bucks County, the girls select pictures from magazines, trim, and paste them on mounting board. The pictures, when completed, will be divided into various classifications and filed.

NYA supplied all labor for the library; the Bristol School Board supplies the mounting board, the paste, and through the school children, the magazines.

Thus far the NYA girls have selected, trimmed, and pasted approximately 500 pictures. The pictures that the girls are working on at present are for the first, second and third grades respectively.

More magazines are needed. If those having magazines with attractive pictures call Bristol Community Center, 3118, they will be called for.

TO PRESENT PLANS FOR RELIEVING TAX BURDEN*Committee of Experts Has Been Studying Tax Situation
For Months*IS STIFLING INDUSTRY

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2—A committee of tax experts of Pennsylvania, which has been studying ways and means of readjusting the present excessive state taxation on business, the principal cause of unemployment in Pennsylvania, will present concrete proposals to the next session of the State Legislature, it was learned today.

The committee of experts has been quietly at work on all phases of the problem since last June, when the Emergency Council of State Associations, a non-political affiliation of 130 trade associations in the State, was formed.

Under the program of the Emergency Council, one group has been developing the facts as to the effect of excessive state taxation on business and unemployment in the State and the second group has been seeking ways of correcting the situation, so that new industries may be attracted to Pennsylvania and present handicaps removed from business.

The recommendations of the tax experts will be presented in the near future to the Executive Committee of the Emergency Council, which will determine what proposals shall be laid before the Legislators. At the same time, the Executive Committee will decide whether or not to make public its suggestions before the State Legislature meets.

In connection with the activities of the tax group, it is learned that study has been given to new alternate sources of revenue, possibilities of economies in state government, as well as tax methods in other competitive States.

Studies by the Emergency Council's committees are in addition to the survey made by the Dent Commission, appointed by the last Legislature. The Dent Commission, which studied the migration of industry from Pennsylvania, has not made public its findings but in a preliminary report said:

"Even at this early date we are in a position to say that the migration of industries from Pennsylvania has reached a point where all thoughtful citizens and especially those entrusted with the making of our laws, will may pause to give serious consideration to the causes of those removals and the painful consequences of this continuous exodus of production, employment, and payrolls from our State. It is deeply significant of a tragic trend which we of Pennsylvania cannot longer ignore or accept without drastic efforts to remove the causes and stop these losses, which are draining employment and purchasing power from our State."

"All that has been set forth here cannot be regarded as more than a cursory glance at the Pennsylvania situation; yet, these specific migrations, liquidations, transfers, and closings account for a total annual payroll lost or displaced amounting to more than $15,000,000 a year."

Select Committees For The High School Play

The Bristol High School Dramatic Club has selected their committees for the annual school play, "Guess Again," which is to be presented Thursday and Friday evenings, November 17th and 18th, in the high school auditorium.

Those students who are serving on the various committees are as follows: Advertising: Herman Corn, Jane Lynch, William Lynch; tickets and programs: Gladys Weik, Anna Warwick; properties: Catherine Ferry, Elizabeth Nelson; prompter: Grace Bigelow; ushers: Wilbur Van Lenten, Jane Lynch, Virginia Vetter; Anna Warwick; scenery and stage: Vincent Cordisco, Wayne Buck, John McHeide, Ernie Monus, Edward Budzyko, Charles Scheffy, Walter Rapella, Arthur Brooks, William Bensch, Walter Hardy.

MOVE TO CLARENCE

Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Lorah and daughter Dorothea Anita, Philadelphia, have moved to Clarence, Center County. Mrs. Lorah was formerly Miss Virginia H. Pone, of Bristol.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Garments for the Newtown Needlework Guild of America will be received November 10 at the New Century Club. All contributors are asked to send their contributions to their director before that time. Those who have not been contributors but desire to help in this worthy cause please notify Mrs. Elizabeth Case and she will advise the director in your section.

Requests for clothing should be in the hands of the directors before November 10. The garments will be on display from 3 o'clock until after the meeting at 8 o'clock. Speakers will be Miss Minnie Sellers, of Christ's Home, and Mrs. Joseph Satterthwaite of Home Service Dept. of Red Cross for Bucks county.

The public is invited to attend this meeting and to inspect the garments.

A haven to Nazi refugees from Germany was offered Sunday afternoon at National Farm School's forty-first annual meeting, when 250 men and women met on the occasion of the annual meeting and the Harvest Festival.

Far smaller than any previous year since the affair has been held, what was lacking in attendance was made up in enthusiasm among the group of officers and directors of the school who greeted the announcement of the acting president of the school that young but worthy German Jewish refugees will be welcomed at Farm School if they are seeking an education.

When Conductor John Morris, of Newtown, signaled his engineer to move his train into the Doylestown station shortly before 9:30 Monday morning, there was no response. A call to the engineer of the two-car electric train brought no response.

Morris walked to the front of the train and found the engineer's cab vacant. Outside, lying on the ground, Morris found his engineer, Fred Woodland, of Phila. Woodland could not talk and both his wrists were badly burned. He was carried to the station platform nearby and Dr. Allen H. Moore, was summoned.

First aid was administered by Dr. Moore and Woodland was then rushed to the Abington Memorial Hospital.

It is believed that a faulty pantograph in the engineer's cabin, might have been the cause of Woodland's mysterious accident. The engineer had some trouble with the pantographs on his run from Philadelphia to Doylestown and it is believed that while the train was standing near the station, waiting for the return trip, that Woodland was working with the instruments when he received with bad burns.

"Woodland looked like a man who had been stricken with apoplexy,"

DR. PAUL S. LEINBACH TO ADDRESS MASS MEETING*Protestant Churches To Hold
Meeting Tonight in Bristol
M. E. Church*TO GIVE SURVEY FACTS

A mass meeting for all Protestants of Bristol and vicinity is to be held in the Methodist Church tonight at eight o'clock.

The speaker will be Dr. Paul S. Leinbach, of Philadelphia. Dr. Leinbach is a preacher of national repute and is at present editor of the Christian Reformed Messenger.

The mass meeting is intended as the formal opening of "Loyalty Month" in the Bristol churches.

The religious survey of last Sunday was a part of the "loyalty" program. The complete returns of the survey are to be made at the mass meeting tonight and as soon as the figures can be tabulated the results of the survey will be published.

Those acquainted with Dr. Leinbach are looking forward to one of the greatest services from which all will be inspired to co-operate enthusiastically in the "Loyalty Month" program in their respective churches.

Firemen Enjoy Program Of Vaudeville Entertainment

The quarterly meeting of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department was held last night and was well attended. Nominations of officers to be elected at the meeting in January were made.

Following the business session there was a program of entertainment and refreshments were served.

The entertainment was furnished by professional talent, including the following: Keil Sisters, harmony singing, musical instruments and dancing; Dorothy Cosler, novelty dancing; Canfield Smith and Elmer Snodgrass, ventriloquist.

Irene Ritter was the accompanist, and Barney Hogan acted as master of ceremonies.

EDGELY, Nov. 2—Mrs. Clarence Young entertained members of her bridge club, Monday evening, at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Ernst Weigel, Philadelphia. The rooms were decorated in Halloween colors with the gifts being hidden in various places. The affair was a complete surprise to Mrs. Weigel.

Those present: The Misses Hilda and Mary MacArthur, Grace Haus, Viola Allen; Mrs. William Crawford, Mrs. Dorothy Jacobson and Mrs. Theodore Smith. Refreshments were served.

Morris said, "His mouth was partly open and he could not talk. Then I discovered the burns on his wrists."

Inspecting at first hand the cause for which they are working, members of the Morrisville Auxiliary to the Methodist Home for the Aged at Philadelphia made a tour of the institution this week and expressed approval of measures being taken to care for the old folks.

The delegation from the Morrisville Methodist Church was entertained at dinner by Dr. J. G. Gacks, field secretary, and by members of the home's executive board.

The visitors found the residents of the home cheerful and contented and obtained information concerning future projects which they will support. The group took with them the remaining fruits and vegetables of their annual donation.

In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hughes, Mrs. Ernest Hulse, Mrs. Frank Coon, Mrs. George Ryan, Mrs. Charles Young, Mrs. William Gentry, Miss Bertha Wharton, Mrs. Reba Leedom, Mrs. Thomas Bell, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Allen, Mrs. Howard Smith, Mrs. Elizabeth Moss, Mrs. William Paxson, the Rev. Charles H. Weller, Mrs. Ella Smyser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stokes, Mrs. Howard Antrobus, Mrs. Edward Scarborough, Mrs. Edward Wiley, Mrs. Roy Ketts, Mrs. Bertha Marsh and Mrs. Albert McGarry.

FORCED TO REPAIR THE MISCHIEF NIGHT DAMAGE*Eight Trenton Girls Re-Nail
"No Gunning" Signs, and Replace Other Items*15 ARRESTS IN YARDLEY

YARDLEY, Nov. 2—Special Officer James Marion made 15 arrests on Saturday for mischief done during the afternoon and evening. Arrests included eight girls from Trenton, who hiked to Yardley and in their travels are alleged to have levelled all the "No Gunning" signs, and other property which was easily pulled apart. On several complaints, Officer Marion rounded up the girls and took them on a trip to visit the Yardley jail, and then following them in their return journey they were made to replace all damage done, and re-nail all signs back where they found them.

During the evening, several warnings were given by Officer Marion for bricks thrown at windows, and other damage. In all cases the offenders were allowed to go, with promises to pay all damage.

On Halloween evening, Officer Marion was assisted in his tours of the town by Donald Hand and Russell Arata. About 11:30 an alarm was turned in for a fire in the cornfield of Elmer MacDonnell. Before sounding a general alarm, the report was investigated, and it was found that well-laid plans for a blaze had gone "out" when the flames didn't ignite in the wet corn stalks. However, 16 alarms were turned in to the operator for fires of similar origin.

Officer Marion, however, trailed the offenders, and was able to secure the names of the entire force, starting the fires. Eight of them were taken before Justice of the Peace George D. Hackett, and were allowed to go with a severe lecture, and a fine of $2 each, as they admitted their guilt. A hearing will be arranged for the other offenders at a later date. All those fined were of school age.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICSBy FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)Unorganized Coalition

Washington, Nov. 1. THERE are so many confusing phases of the election to be held next Tuesday that in only a few States and between a few candidates is there a clear-cut question or a definite principle upon which the voters can logically and simply decide.

NOWHERE is this more true than in States where the candidacy of a Democratic Senator for re-election brings to the front recollection of the part he played in the great Supreme Court packing fight of 1937. The effort of the President at that time to force through Congress a bill which would have made the court subservient to the Executive raised one of the greatest issues of our time. That proposal deeply stirred the American people, and the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt then at the very peak of his popularity, was historic and unprecedented.

Gunfire

Five deaths from misdirected gunfire and four from ailing hearts, was Pennsylvania's toll of hunter fatalities today, as the third clear morning of the small game season lured thousands afield.

The fifth gunshot victim, Michael Sopota, 21, of Johnstown, who was reported as accidentally shot by a companion, died today.

The first two days of hunting last year claimed the lives of four men, while 125 others were injured.

Dissolve Injunctions

Harrisburg, Nov. 2—The injunctions issued against the Thompson Legislative Committee investigating race track gambling in Pennsylvania, today were dissolved by the Dauphin County Court.

As a result, the Thompson Committee was scheduled to resume its hearings here today.

The court lifted the three injunctions which barred the commission from subpoenaing M. L. Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and his son, Walter Annenberg, for questioning.

Two Believed Fatally Hurt

Philadelphia, Nov. 2—James Devine, 20, was found fatally shot, and 17-year-old Catherine Mackey, was found bleeding to death from a bullet wound in her chest in the living room of the girl's home in West Philadelphia, early today, police reported. Miss Mackey was taken to a hospital where physicians held little hope for her recovery. Detectives said they were mystified as to details of the tragedy, while members of the girl's family slept.

Of the Afternoon*THIRTY IN THE PARTY

The Bucks County Dogwood Association visited Revolutionary sites in the Delaware River valley section of the Valley Forge-Washington Crossing Dogwood Trail on Saturday. About 30 members were in attendance.

The group met at the General Green Inn, Bogart's tavern during the Revolution. They visited the room where General Greene held his staff meetings. Mrs. William S. Erdman, of Buckingham, gave a brief history of the historical tavern.

The motorcade then proceeded to the "Buckingham Friends' Meeting House in Lahaska. Miss Marion Broadhurst outlined the part it played during the Revolution as a hospital for the sick and wounded of Washington's army.

The meeting house is practically unchanged from that day. Electricity was not installed until 1934. Bullet holes and scars may still be seen, and in making some minor repairs recently, a lead bullet was found wedged in a beam. This bullet is to be mounted on a plaque and preserved. The presence of the bullet and the bullet holes is a mystery as no battle or skirmish was fought in the vicinity. Practice shooting is the most likely explanation, according to historians.

The next stop was at Paxson's Corner at Aquetown where the group were shown through "Rolling Green," the Paxson home of the Revolution. General Charles Lee and six brigades encamped here June 20, 1778. The present occupant of the house, Mrs. William Nichols, told of the historical associations of the house and displayed a woven wicker porridge bowl that was left behind when the soldiers departed, presumably a part of the equipment of the soldier who died there and was buried in the Paxson orchard.

This grave was suitably marked by the D. A. R., but the bronze plaque was "collected" by one of those whose interest in history is entirely personal.

At New Hope the sites of Coryell's ferry, the ferry tavern (Logan Inn) and the Parry mansion were visited, and their importance given real meaning by a talk by Mrs. Samuel Paxson.

The old fort site of entrenchments, and the Washington tree site, also in New Hope, were then visited. The explanatory notes were given by Mrs. Walter W. Ely.

The next stop was at Malta Island, where the Durham boats which were to carry Washington's army across the ice-filled river on Christmas night in 1776, were hidden.

The group then went down the River road to the Thompson House, headquarters of Lord Sterling and his aide, Lieutenant James Monroe.

After a picnic lunch in the welcome Indian Summer warmth, the graves of Revolutionary soldiers along the river were visited. Mrs. William Tinsman, of Lumberville, touched on the historical highlights of this section.

The final stop was made at Washington Crossing, the McKonkey's Ferry of the Revolution, where the tavern ferry house, site of embarkation, Taylor's Island and the Valley of Concentration, were pointed out by Mrs. Earl Tomb.

The entire trip was organized by Mrs. Harry J. Shoemaker, well-known Doylestown club-woman and nature lover, who planned the memorial trail.

Robert B. McKenney, of Newtown, president of the Bucks County Dogwood Association, closed the day's outing with a brief talk on planting native trees and shrubs instead of importations that are never quite at home in our soil.

ABANDONED

It is not strange that Nazi officials in Berlin profess themselves not at all concerned about the trial of several persons charged here with espionage in behalf of the German government.

Said a German foreign office official: "We view the trial with absolute equanimity. We have the feeling that even in America there is no great enthusiasm over the spy case because the man who dug up the information on which the charges are based tried to sell his story for publication."

It may be doubted whether that fact has anything to do with whatever lack of enthusiasm Americans may feel over this case. And we don't think it has anything to do with German equanimity either. The fact is that the spy who is caught is just out of luck. The government for which he or she works simply washes its hands of all responsibility, denies knowledge of his or her existence and forgets all about it. That is the first rule of the game. And if the German foreign office is undisturbed about what may happen to its alleged spies in America it is because it closely observes that rule.

Besides, it knows that whatever may happen here, death will not follow conviction, as it does in Germany.

ABOUT GROWING OLD

The psychologist who said the other day that old age and death is a mere matter of psychology, seems to be skipping about the edge of sophistry. To claim full credit for modern knowledge which has lengthened human life five years in two generations is one thing, but to reach from that for a logical conclusion that life may be prolonged indefinitely by mere psychological effort is something different. This would be comforting to those who desire to live to be 200 years old but before men reach that age other knowledge than merely how to wish for prolonged existence will be necessary.

To fix an arithmetical program by which human life is to be lengthened according to the ratio of the first modern steps is to invite disappointment. Some time possibly, men may live to be much older than in this generation, but when that time arrives human beings will be found living as well as thinking in a manner far from the habits of 1938. Physical death and old age is something more than a simple matter of psychology, at least in man's present state of knowledge.

Though long familiar in the offices of newspapers, that "stop press" cry is new in the map factories.

"Often a Bridesmaid"

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XIX

One boy left, and then the other two. Lane sat on in the darkness with Natalie. She was a nice child, he always enjoyed her, in spite of her sharp tongue.

"And so you're sitting, waiting for Margaret, as usual," she said.

"Yep. One of the Raleigh twins swallowed a safety pin or something, and they sent for her. I wish everyone wouldn't impose on her."

"So do I. But we all do. I hate myself for it, but I do. We're selfish to the core, the whole kit and kaboodle of us."

"You're entertaining, anyway," he smiled.

She smiled too. "I know. But so's Margaret. That's the funny part. Looks and everything. Sometimes I almost hate her, she's so perfect!"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that!"

"I would! But I don't really hold it against her. She's a grand gal. Make you a swell wife, by the way, how's it coming? Going to talk her into it?"

He hesitated. Lit a cigaret. She took it away from him and made him light another for himself. "Oh, well—let's forget our troubles for a couple of minutes. Tell me about the boat. Are you really going to buy a boat and sail to the South Seas?"

"Well, I—"

She put her hand on his. "Honey, don't let anybody—not even Margaret—cheat you of what you want. Go! If you have to go alone!"

Margaret said, "Of course I don't care, Nat darling. Why should I?"

"Well, he was yours. I practically took him away from you. At least it would seem that way. I hope you won't think I did."

"Don't be silly. If Lane Penney were mine, you couldn't take him away."

"Couldn't... But Sue had taken Kenneth... And of course, Nat had taken Lane, not that she cared of course. She hadn't wanted him, she wasn't jealous. Except that it hurt, just a little when someone who has begged you to marry him... well, not in words, but in every other way, for two years, suddenly turns around and gets engaged to your sister!"

For the first time, Margaret really saw Natalie as an individual. Not her pert little sister, who was generous with chocolates and stinky with bath salts and perfume, her little sister who had borrowed her silk stockings and beaux and handkerchiefs for years. But Natalie Wickham, a small, blonde woman, with devastating ways and a wide, laughing mouth in which there was no gentleness.

She saw, what she'd never dreamed before, that Nat wanted Lane Penney, that she ached with love for him, as she once upon a time had ached with love for someone who didn't love her enough. She saw that Natalie was seething with excitement, under her pose of sophisticated boredom.

"Lane was mad for a boat, you know, but I talked him out of it and into a trailer. I'd rather go to France, and it was his original idea, anyway—remember?"

"Yes, I remember," Margaret said.

"Oh, you don't. You never half listened to what Lane said. You were always thinking about something else. Sue and her babies... Maggie, promise you won't be angry if I say something?"

"Of course, not! If I got angry at all your impertinences—"

"I know, but usually you don't listen. That's it. I'm scared about you, sometimes. I know you didn't care about Lane and, of course, he really didn't care deeply about you, or he wouldn't have turned to me—but you OUGHT to care about somebody. My goodness, you can't trail around with Kenny and Sue all your life!"

"There's still Joe, and a few others, thank you!"

But her mouth twitched. For a moment she wondered... She had thought there was Lane, too. For a moment she saw herself as Natalie was seeing her, and she saw Joe, as he must seem to others. Handsome, tall, bronzed, a blond giant, with a rising reputation in engineering circles. A catch! The man the Deckers would have liked to have for a son-in-law. The man her father and Aunt Bet, and every one who cared about her future, would like to see her married to.

And he hadn't been very lovely lately. He'd been gay and he'd been serious and he'd been full of his work, and full of his plans for the future. But he hadn't implied, as he used to imply...

Well, what if he hadn't! They'd been too busy running around having a good time. And she'd been too busy. And it was nothing to how busy she was going to be now, until Natalie was married.

After the first awkwardness of explaining that she was being a bridesmaid again—not the bride—Margaret took the entire business happily in charge.

There was Daddy to placate, and Aunt Bet. While Lane Penney was Lane Penney, junior partner with Jenney & Hollister, he was an eligible bridegroom. But a young man, who withdraws from a profitable and promising post and admits that he hasn't any very clear idea of making a living while gypsying about the country, is something else again.

Even Aunt Bet's hope that his uncle might do the right thing by the young folks, was dashed when Lane admitted blithely that though Uncle Tina had taken him into the firm, he had no idea of making him his heir. "Whatever Uncle Tina leaves will go to his two sisters and his daughter, Audrey."

"But your inheritance, from your mother?" Aunt Bet began, delicately.

"Oh, that?" Lane said, and grinned.

"Tell 'em you squandered it in riotous living," Natalie prompted.

"Well, the truth is, by the time father's estate was settled, mother didn't have anything like the fortune she was supposed to have had. And then she died when I was 16, you know, and though Uncle Tina boosted it some by his handling, I came into it, principal and all, when I was 21, and—well, I've done a lot of spending these last years, as Nat says—"

Nat's eyes rested, just for a moment on Margaret. Accusingly, Margaret thought. But before she could resent it, before she could cry, even inwardly, "But I never took anything from him, really! What he spent on me, he'd have spent on himself or any girl!" Natalie had turned to Lane again.

"What does it matter?" she said. "We're going to LIVE!"

Aunt Bet tried, ineffectually, to make Natalie listen to her familiar argument about "material things counting, more than you think now, dear." Alex Wickham brought up, unfortunately, the case history of Sue and Kenneth, who had married on nothing and, in spite of her parents' generosity, weren't getting along too well.

Margaret winced, and Babs said, "Oh, well, Sue's a fool and Kenny never did have any brains. He should have stuck to football. It'll be different with Nat and Lane."

"I should hope so!" Natalie agreed, comfortably.

"And, by the way," Babs went on. "I heard it on terribly good authority, but it's a heavy secret, and I'm not supposed to tell, that Ken is trying to get back to football. He's applied for a coaching job—coaching football up in the northern part of the state somewhere—some high school. He'll have to teach sewing or china painting or something besides, though. They always do, in those little schools."

"I hadn't heard—" Margaret began.

"Oh, it's a secret!" Babs repeated, cheerfully. "And he probably won't get it, anyway. He'd have to go back to summer session, or he might have to go back to school for another year to get his teaching credits. And he couldn't do that unless papa Decker paid the bills, and he probably won't."

"I don't believe it. Sounds like a lot of campus gossip to me." Margaret said, stoutly.

And as she thought of Ken, worrying, not telling her, and of Sue, who would be no help in the crisis, she suddenly realized something else. That her baby sister, Babs, was also grown up. That she, too, was an individual, a woman grown. That soon she, too, would be marrying.

If I don't hurry, I'll be the old maid in the family, she thought, worriedly. And then she lifted her head, and looked straight into her mirror above the living room fireplace.

She saw herself, and her sister, and in the background, Aunt Bet and her father. She saw Babs, too, chubby little face, with the straw-colored hair growing out of a fuzzy permanent. She saw Natalie's muddy-blonde sausage-like curls, above a face that was piquant but would never be pretty. And she saw her own shining gold waves, above her wide, white forehead, her delicate, perfect features.

Involuntarily, she smiled. She wasn't vain. She just saw, in the old mirror's faintly greenish depths, what she'd always known, what she'd always heard, that she was, and would always be, the beauty of the family.

It was tacitly understood that Natalie's wedding would be a quiet one. It didn't occur to any of the Wickhams that she would want a big wedding. Wasn't she marrying a boy who would be practically penniless? Weren't they going off in a trailer, to a sort of artistic oasis in the desert in New Mexico?

But Natalie surprised them all by the extravagance of her ideas. "It's our stepping off into the simple life," she argued, "and if we don't make a loud noise over the step people will think we just fell!"

Margaret thought of Sue's wedding and Sue's trousseau, her white satin dressing gown cut up into coats for the twins. But at least the Deckers could afford it, and the Wickhams couldn't. It would be largely up to her. Nat never saved a nickel, and, of course, Daddy couldn't do much. Still, it was the first wedding in the family, and the more they talked about it, the larger it became.

"No fuss," Alex Wickham said, "but a church wedding, of course."

"Naturally I don't want a circus wedding, with white satin and tulle and all that," Natalie said, "but there's no civilized law against making oneself as easy to look upon as possible. Something VERY simple, but nice. A going-away effect. Something I can use for traveling, too."

Elsons had just the thing—a French blue dressmaker suit with a deep blue blouse and a deep blue topcoat to go with it.

Conscientiously Margaret mentioned it, and the price.

"But we CAN'T pay that much!" Nat said.

"It is really more than I can afford, and I hate to run bills at the shop."

"Well, I might try it on," Natalie said, "just to get an idea."

So they bought it, and shoes and hat and gloves and bag to match.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

A gripping drama of modern aviation and a timely glimpse behind the scenes of the training that today's fliers must undergo, are both presented in RKO Radio's "Sky Giant," which opens today at the Bristol Theatre.

Richard Dix, co-starred with Joan Fontaine and Chester Morris in this up-to-the-minute offering, plays a noted pilot transferred to managing a big aviation school under the strict discipline of its superintendent, Harry Carey. Carey's son, Morris, enrolls in the school without his father's knowledge, and the conflict begins, with Dix in continual hot water trying to keep matters smoothed out between father and son.

The romantic element is introduced when both men fall in love with Miss Fontaine. Drama results through a quarrel between Morris and Miss Fontaine. Dix marries the girl himself just before setting out with Morris and another pilot, Paul Guilfoyle, on a dangerous flight, intended to map out an air route to Europe via Alaska and Siberia.

GRAND

Giving, as the title implies, a really intimate glimpse of the private life as well as the public career of an actress, the Warner Bros. picture, "Secrets of an Actress," comes to the Grand Theatre Wednesday with a cast headed by Kay Francis, George Brent and Ian Hunter—that is advance certification of its fine quality.

Kay Francis is, of course, the actress of the title, and it is no secret that the part she plays is that of a glamorous woman, who has two important men in her life.

At the outset of the picture, Kay is a stage actress who has tramped the length and breadth of the country but has never had a chance on Broadway. This chance she finally gets when the producer, played by Ian Hunter, reads a play she owns and decides to produce it. George Brent is an architect working for Hunter who designs the scenery for the production which introduces Kay successfully to Broadway.

I HAVEN'T TIME TO TALK TO YOU NOW
YOU'RE NOT GOING TO TALK TO US. WE'RE GOING TO TALK TO YOU AND YOU'LL LISTEN. FIRST, WE ADVISE YOU TO LAY OFF THE "PUG" RAVEN CASE. YOU LEAVE IT OVER FOR THE "BUSTER" WHEN HE MOVES INTO YOUR OFFICE

AND IF I DON'T DO AS YOU SAY? IN THAT CASE, WE'LL BE OBLIGED TO PULL THE ROOF DOWN AROUND YOUR EARS

ARE YOU THREATENING ME? NOT AT ALL. I'M MERELY WARNING YOU

YOU'VE BEEN SEEN CALLING ON "BIG DAN" AT HIS HIDEOUT. YOU SEARCHED FOR "PUGS" EMPTY SHELL AT DAN'S ORDERS. YOU MADE RESERVATIONS FOR THAT GANG OF CUT-THROAT FROM WESTERN CITY AT THE AVENUE HOTEL. YOU SENT THE TELEGRAM THAT BROUGHT ON "TRIGGER" MURK TO KILL "THE BUSTER".... PUT THEM ALL TOGETHER, THEY SPELL FINIS FOR YOU

ST. ANN'S TO PRACTICE
TOMORROW NIGHT

Football practice for the St. Ann's A. A. team will be held tomorrow night instead of tonight. The "Saints" are preparing for their annual clash with the Andalusia Big Green, Sunday, at Andalusia.

Coach Dougherty held a short practice session last night and pointed out the faults of the game with Doylestown which the locals lost by the score of 9-0. A long pass led to the Doylestown score.

Andalusia has been beaten but once in seven games. Bordentown Manual Training School doing the trick last Saturday. They won Sunday's tilt against the Arlington Bears.

JIM LONDOS TO OPPOSE
CHIEF LITTLE WOLF

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—The great wrestling card ever offered to Central Jersey fandom will be presented tonight at the Trenton Arena. Jim Londos, the Golden Greek and former heavyweight champion of the world, will oppose Chief Little Wolf, colorful Navajo Indian and death-lock expert, in the feature two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit encounter. This is the most important wrestling match to be contested here, and Promoter Johnny Ipp gave both Londos and Little Wolf the largest guarantee ever paid here.

In addition to the sterling windup, Jumping Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, and an ace favorite of local fandom, will tangle with Casey Berger, undefeated Southerner, in the semi-windup.

Sammy "One Man Riot" Cohen will face Tommy Mahoney, classy Florida Irishman; Sammy Menacher, popular Bronx Hebrew, meets Walter Percy, speedy Englishman; and Hank Matheny, smooth-domed St. Louis veteran, will vie with Pete Peterson.

There will be no advance in prices, and the first bout will start at $3.00 p. m.

The Great Game of Politics

and Hayden, of Arizona—are almost certain to be re-elected.

THEY ARE in either unshakably Democratic States of the South or States where the Democrats are normally too strong to be fought effectively. Nevertheless, it will be interesting to see whether an analysis of the vote for these six court-packing Senators in their safely Democratic States does not show a significant shrinkage over their 1932 majorities. Unquestionably there are in all these States Democrats whose feelings were so outraged by the effort to seize the court that they will vote with the Republicans against Senators who abetted that effort. Certainly, that will be true in the cases of the other seven—Wagner, of New York; Brown, of New Hampshire; Bulkley, of Ohio; McGill, of Kansas; Bone, of Washington; Duffy, of Wisconsin; Thomas, of Utah.

THAT THERE will be in those States a considerable coalescing of anti-New Deal Democrats with the Republicans against the court-packing Democrats is not disputed. The same thing will take place in Pennsylvania, where the Democratic candidate, Governor Earle, though not in the Senate, made a statement favoring the President's plan. No one, of course, will be able to tell how extensive this coalition of Democrats and Republicans will be until after the election—and not accurately then. But the reality of the coalition is not open to doubt. It is unorganized, but quite concrete. In all these States a certain number of Democratic men and women will vote for the Republicans against the re-nominated court-packers, just as in the others, such as Maryland, Missouri, Indiana, Nevada, a certain number of Republicans will vote for the re-nominated anti-court-packing Democrats. It will be surprising if one or more of the former are not retired to private life by this coalition. It is more than a year since the court-packing bill was killed, but this is the first election since and to a great many the issue then raised is still vibrant.

CORRECTION—Recently in this place it was stated that Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, had swallowed every New Deal experiment and voted for all New Deal measures. To some extent, this did Senator Bulkley an injustice. He did not vote for the AAA or for the invalidation of the gold clause. However, he was for the court-packing plan, the reorganization bill, all WPA and PWA appropriations. In the main he has been a thoroughly docile and dependable New Deal Senator and is so regarded by his colleagues.

AS SEABISCUIT RACED TO U. S. TURF CROWN
Here is a picture made as Seabiscuit, brilliant son of Hardack, crossed the finish line to win the "horse race of the century" at Pimlico Racetrack, Md., from War Admiral, greatest son of the great Man o' War. Fifty-five thousand racing fans watched the race. At the finish the distance between Seabiscuit and the vanquished War Admiral was four lengths.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Pennsylvania's Recreational Opportunities

(This is the first in a series of articles on recreation in Pennsylvania—its present facilities and potentialities.)

(Prepared for The Courier by F. A. Pitkin, Executive Director, Pennsylvania State Planning Board.)
"Pennsylvania Has Everything," the slogan popularized by the State Publicity Commission, is nowhere more appropriate than in regard to the resources which exist for recreational development.

For, despite the facts that Pennsylvania is the most highly industrialized state in the Union; that it has a population density of 214.8 persons to the square mile, as compared with 42 for the Nation as a whole, our State is a far cry from being all urban area. Actually less than 10 per cent of the area is urbanized.

Pennsylvania has natural facilities for parks and recreation equalled by few states. It has beautiful forest-clad mountains, studded with springs and glens. It has sparkling rivers, gorges and water vistas that make a perfect complement to the forests. The variety of its plants and trees provides one continual parade for the nature lover, spring, summer, autumn and even in the winter. The abundant wild life—the hundred and more species of song birds and game birds; the squirrels, raccoons, deer, and bear, and the host of other animals, the fish-stocked streams all add life and movement and zest to the outdoors to a degree not met within most states.

Pennsylvania's recreational paradise now is open to our large population by a magnificent road system. The poorest can enjoy our recreation with the richest, except for transportation. Because of this transportation problem our recreation facilities need great expansion within the radius of a day's outing (perhaps 50 miles) of our urban population centers. Shorter working hours and more vacation increase the recreational use of our forests and streams. The popular response to added picnic, park and outing facilities is outstripping the present facilities.

What is being done to meet this popular demand for increased recreational facilities will be discussed in succeeding articles.
